Why we want you

We understand that people lead busy lives, whether you are a student, work part-time, enjoy socialising, are a parent or grandparent juggling children, work, and family responsibilities, or have a host of other commitments.

Help us save the environment by volunteering for woods and trees in a way which suits you, from a one-off event to an irregular or short-term commitment. However you wish to give your time, we want you to be able to get involved!

Our Drop in Days roles will make volunteering for woods and trees more accessible and will help us achieve our goal of enabling everyone, no matter age, ethnicity, disability or skill, to volunteer with us.

What you will be doing

- Listening to a training briefing with other volunteers
- Collecting tree seeds using the equipment provided
- Simple processing of seeds during breaks

The skills you need

- No prior skill needed, just an interest in native trees and a willingness to learn about tree identification!

What's in it for you

- Learn more about native trees and seeds, how to recognise them and collect viable seeds.
- An opportunity to volunteer outdoors for a day.
